

The Chrysanthemum Show. One of the treats which the Indiana people ought to enjoy is the annual chrysanthemum show, which is given each November at Tomlinson Hall. The time for this season is the coming week, and from Tuesday evening through until late Friday evening the place will be a garden of flow-ers, such as only those who have attended Ill., and Mr. Tower, of Oakland, Md. a like display have ever seen. The vast room will be the center for a show of the most gorgeous blossoms, and they are of every conceivable variety and color. The history of the chrysanthemum is interesting, especially the progress of the flower in the this country. From the garden blossom, cultivated by the grandmother of several decades ago, it has come to occupy a place of honor for six weeks every fall, which even the rose cannot surpass. A rose grower calls the chrysanthemum "an artistic weed." and derides its popularity, but in the golden October it begins its reign of fashion, and there are few gatherings, public or private, where the flower does not hold the place of honor in the line of decorations. The splendor of the color ing and the size of the blossoms make them conspicuous, and a few will adorn a place where it would take dozens and dozens of roses or any smaller flower. When it is considered that one side of a petal is red and the other a golden yellow, or one petal a pink and the opposite a white or lavender, then one can begin to realize the wonderful variety which the florists can present in this flower. In addition to the flower show there will be promenade con-certs each evening, and from the dearth of social affairs for the week the chrysanthe-mum show bids fair to secure a larger at-tendance of society people than it has ever
